STREAMS® modernisation and Transmax's transition to a sustainable, growth-ready future

The Transmax Board acknowledges the significant progress being made in the modernisation of the STREAMS Intelligent Transport Systems (ITS) platform, ensuring it continues to improve travel for Queenslanders and other jurisdictions across Australia where it is operational.

Transmax CEO Iain Denholm said the company is committed to safer, smarter, and more connected transport networks.

“STREAMS is the backbone of intelligent road network management both in Queensland and nationally, and it is now time to ensure that Transmax as an organisation is appropriately structured to successfully deliver the next-generation platform and that it is sustainably supported going forward,” Iain said.

Transmax, a Transport and Main Roads-owned company and national leader in ITS technology, continues to play a critical role in enabling safer and more efficient transport through its STREAMS platform, a system designed to support real-time network management, optimise road performance, and deliver safer and more reliable journeys.

The modernisation of STREAMS is a core component of Queensland's preparations for the 2032 Olympic and Paralympic Games, and a key enabler of long-term improvements to regional and urban road networks.

With delivery of the next-generation platform significantly progressed, Transmax is transforming its organisation to align with current and future business needs. This transition entails changes to the Executive Team to strengthen customer focus and financial sustainability to ensure the business remains agile, efficient, and growth-ready.

“This is a necessary step. We have listened to feedback from our customers and our people delivering this generational change,” Iain added.

“Transmax is ensuring it is structured for long-term success, delivering strong value for Queensland while staying at the forefront of transport technology.”

The refreshed Executive Team brings a depth of experience and will guide the organisation through the next phase of continuing to deliver innovative transport solutions across Queensland and the broader Australian market.
